The model was created by Ed Halley. You can also see your original text instructions here, or you can see the traditional origami diagrams here. Instructions for Money Eds Butterfly Start with a crisp dollar bill with the black side facing up. Fold & unfold the dollar bill in half. Fold up the left side of the dollar bill, so that the bottom edge of the paper aligns with the average bustle made in step 1. Repeat on the right side, except fold the paper down to the upper edge of the paper corresponding to the middle of the creasing. Trim the pattern. Fold the top right corner down. Fold the lower left corner up. Valley fold the overhang strip of paper and tuck it under the main body pattern. Mountain fold (fold back) on the right side of the pattern so that it is behind the left side of the pattern. Rotate a quarter turn clockwise. Make a thorax (body) butterfly: Mountain fold (fold back), right side behind the left side of the pattern. Unfold. Make the valley fold, stretching from the head of the butterfly to the base of the pattern. The angle of the fold may vary, it will change the size of the chest. A convenient endpoint is the quarter mark of the edge of the dollar note. Fold the left wing back to the left. Follow the existing folds made in step 6. Valley times the left wing back to the right. Make the left and right wings symmetrical by adding wing tips (green dots). That's how it looks. The chest is finished. The next steps will be the production of the upper and lower wings. Open the pattern so that it resembles a butterfly. Make the Lower Wings: Mountain fold right wing behind the left wing. Follow the ridge, where the paper overlaps on itself. Fold back to the basic butterfly shape. Repeat the equivalent mountain fold on the left. Make the Upper Wing: Mountain fold (fold back) at the top of the wings. The creasing should go from the head of the butterfly to the middle of the wing. The location of the fold may vary to change the size of the upper and lower wings. Make the lower wings: Fold the lower wings so that the upper wings swing up. Make a fold to expand from the head of the butterfly to the middle length of the lower wing. The location of the fold may vary. Money Eds Butterfly is done! Note that you can change the location of the wings and chest folds. On the left side of the butterfly was folded halfway to all the steps. On the right side of the butterfly was folded, so the folds are not exactly in the middle. It gives a slightly different look. The butterfly is mostly green if you start with the black side, if the bill is facing up. If you start with the green side up, the butterfly will be black and white with a splotchy pattern. The room was quite small and the bathroom was quite small. This origami dollar pencil butterfly is called Money Twist Tie Butterfly because it requires something to tie two pieces together: something like a twist tie or flower wire. The design inspired the photo on this flickr site, but it's probably a traditional model. It uses two $1 bills and a twist tie. Twist tie is thin metal covered with paper or plastic. It is flexible and is often used to keep bags closed. You can also use a pipe cleaner or an elastic band. Anything flexible and can fasten things together could work. Spruce Crafts wow factor in this DIY is off the map. There's something boyish about this origami piece, so it makes a great gift for dads, husbands, friends or colleagues. No doubt they'll appreciate the gesture while ooh-ing and aah-ing your handmade. How to make an Easy Origami Dollar shirt from Spruce Crafts We write about the products and services we use.
